

Nightingale

by Christophe de la Fontaine

A porcelain table lamp with a leather handle, produced in collaboration with Rosenthal. The traditional lampshade is rotated by 90°, turning the usual interaction between the light fitting and reflector upside down. The delicate porcelain body distantly recalls the look of an antique lantern. A leather band available in three natural color variants, serving as a handle that can be used to change the position of the light and add a striking, warm contrast between different materials.
